OUTLAND TRIP

HUNT TO BE RESUMED TODAY

For Reputed Pirate Hunt, Beaded Up in 1935.

Out of the Atlantic Avenue police station yesterday came a police and press parade determined, after three hours of busy search, to find a mysterious Oriental who, according to the police, had been"beaded up." The Oriental, identified as a Negro working for a "scented" cigar store on Atlantic Avenue, was found, evidently under the influence of some sort of drug, lying on the sidewalk near the station.

Just what they were searching for, the police said, they did not know. All they did know was that they were hunting the Oriental, who, according to the police, had been seen in various parts of the city during the day. They did not know what he was looking for, but they did know that he was wanted by the police.

That he was wanted by the police, the police said, was because he had been seen in various parts of the city during the day. They did not know why he had been seen in various parts of the city during the day, but they did know that he was wanted by the police.

The police said they did not know what he was looking for, but they did know that he was wanted by the police. They did not know why he had been seen in various parts of the city during the day, but they did know that he was wanted by the police.

The police said they did not know what he was looking for, but they did know that he was wanted by the police. They did not know why he had been seen in various parts of the city during the day, but they did know that he was wanted by the police.